Years ago, while visiting California, I was captivated by the wind farms that dotted the landscape. Today I am a supporter of Cape Wind as we transition to cleaner energy sources.

According to the Minerals Management Service review, Cape Wind's projected output would be enough to meet the yearly demand from about 223,776 households, roughly 75 percent of the average electricity demand on the Cape and Islands, thereby reducing the flow of electricity from other sources into the Cape and Islands grid.

Investing in renewable, clean energy is not just an environmental imperative, it's an economic opportunity.

Massachusetts has proudly served as innovator and incubator for high tech, biotech, academia, and health care - industries that have improved our quality of life and enriched our economy.

The Sierra Club has endorsed my candidacy and as your state senator, I plan to make Green-Tech research, jobs and marketing our next "industrial revolution".
